TRUMP: UN SANCTIONS ONLY SMALL STEP

President Donald Trump said that the latest U.N. sanctions on North Korea were only a very small step and nothing compared what would have to happen to deal with the country's nuclear program. The U.N. Security Council unanimously voted to boost sanctions on North Korea, with its profitable textile exports now banned and fuel supplies capped, prompting a traditionally defiant threat of retaliation against the United States. Monday's decision, triggered by the North's sixth and largest nuclear test this month, was the ninth such resolution unanimously adopted by the 15-member Security Council since 2006 over North Korea's ballistic missile and nuclear programs. A tougher initial U.S. draft was weakened to win the support of China, Pyongyang's main ally and trading partner, and Russia, both of which hold veto power in the council.

MORE THAN 50 ARRESTED FOR LOOTING IN MIAMI

Miami area police arrested more than 50 suspected looters during Hurricane Irma, including 26 people who were accused of breaking into a single Wal-Mart store, authorities said on Tuesday. City officials on Tuesday lifted a local 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. curfew that had been in place since Sunday. As normality began to return, police commanders said officers will work 12-hour shifts, 24 hours a day, to discourage any more criminality. "I said we would not tolerate criminal activity or looting or anybody who takes advantage of our residents," Deputy Chief of Police Luis Cabrera said at a news conference. "I was not joking." The Wal-Mart incident took place on Saturday night at a store on the north side of the City of Miami, said Miami-Dade Police Department spokesman Alvaro Zabaleta.

US JOB OPENINGS AT RECORD HIGH

Job openings rose to a record high in July, suggesting a slowdown in job growth in August was an aberration and that the labor market was strong before the disruptive hurricanes. The monthly Job Openings and Labor Turnover Survey released by the Labor Department on Tuesday showed the labor market continued to tighten amid a scarcity of workers. Strong labor market fundamentals could encourage the Federal Reserve to continue tightening monetary policy despite inflation persistently running below the U.S. central bank's 2 percent target. "Employers need skilled labor and experienced workers are in short supply, which continues to suggest the economy has returned to a relatively normal labor market that does not need exceptional support from the Fed," said John Ryding, chief economist at RDQ Economics.

JPMORGAN'S DIMON SAYS BITCOIN 'IS A FRAUD'

Bitcoin "is a fraud" and will blow up, Jamie Dimon, chief executive of JPMorgan Chase & Co., said. Speaking at an investor conference in New York, Dimon said, "The currency isn't going to work. You can't have a business where people can invent a currency out of thin air and think that people who are buying it are really smart." Dimon said that if any JPMorgan traders were trading the crypto-currency, "I would fire them in a second, for two reasons: It is against our rules and they are stupid, and both are dangerous." Dimon's comments come as the bitcoin, a virtual currency not backed by any government, has more than quadrupled in value since December to more than $4,100. Bitcoin is a digital currency that enables individuals to transfer value to each other and pay for goods and services bypassing banks and the mainstream financial system.

Apple unveils new iPhone models, prices and release dates during keynote event

Expect to pay over $1,000 for the shiny iPhone X.

On Tuesday, Apple unveiled the iPhone 8, iPhone 8 Plus and the iPhone X along with other products during a special event held inside the Steve Jobs Theater at Apple's new headquarters in Cuperino, California.

iPhone 8, iPhone 8 Plus

The iPhone has always been the most highly anticipated device during Apple events. Both phones feature a new design made with glass on both sides. Apple claims it is the most durable glass ever used in a smartphone.

The iPhone 8 and 8 Plus will feature the new A11 Bionic chip with 3 gigs of RAM. Both phones will have wireless charging. This means you can set your phone down on a charging mat and charge your phone without plugging it in. It will also free up your Lightening port and give you the ability to charge your phone and use your headphones at the same time.

The 8 Plus model will use facial detection technology in its camera to allow users to take advantage of advanced light effects when using the camera in Portrait Mode. According to Apple, the 12-megapixel camera on both models have been improved and you'll be able to get sharper detail in photos and better results in low light.

Availability: Orders begin Sept. 15; shipments begin Sept. 22.

Price: The iPhone 8 and the 8 Plus will start at $699 and $799 for the 64GB version. Expect to pay $849 and $949 for the 256GB.

iPhone X

To mark the 10th anniversary of the iPhone, Apple unveiled the iPhone X. Apple claims the iPhone X is the "biggest leap forward" when it comes to advancing smartphone technology.

The phone will feature an edge-to-edge display and will not have a conventional home button.

One of the biggest features the iPhone X has is a new feature Apple is calling Face ID Face ID uses facial recognition technology to unlock the phone.

As for security, Apple claims that facial recognition is more accurate than Touch ID. The company said there will be a one-in-a-million chance of someone gaining access to your phone.

Like the other iPhones, the iPhone X will come in 64GB and 256GB sizes.

Availability: Orders for the iPhone X will begin Oct. 27. The phone will not begin shipping on Nov. 3.

Price: Expect to pay $999 for the 64 GB version and $1,149 for the 256 GB.

ANALYSIS

We asked Thomas Butler, a mechanical engineering student at Drexel University and manager at iGeeks at the Exton Square Mall in Exton, Pennsylvania, about the iPhone X.

So, is the iPhone X revolutionary or meh?

"I think for an iPhone this is certainly going to be revolutionary, but I don't think they are doing anything for the industry," Butler said.

Facial recognition sets the iPhone X apart from last year's model, but since Samsung already has used facial recognition, it isn't a mind-blowing addition.

Butler said the phone is expected to be waterproof, which again, is nothing new "but it's nice." Apple has confirmed the iPhone X will allow for wireless charging, Butler told us, and in order for that to happen, it will be designed as a "glass sandwich," with the addition of a glass back.

The "glass sandwich" has been used by LG and Samsung, so while it's an upgrade for iPhone users, it isn't a bombshell for the industry.

MIT, IBM researchers to study how AI can better humankind

The new AI Lab, a partnership between MIT and IBM, will take a deep dive into artificial intelligence.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

Artificial intelligence is becoming unavoidable, and whether we like it or not, AI will be a part of our future. But how much do we really know about the technology, and how will we be prepared to tackle the challenges it poses?

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology and IBM are putting their "minds and hands" together to delve into just those questions and to dive into AI. MIT and the computer company recently announced a joint effort to research AI by together establishing the new MIT-IBM Watson AI Lab.

IBM will make a 10-year, $240 million investment in order to create the lab. And despite the concerns around AI, the lab will take a more positive approach.

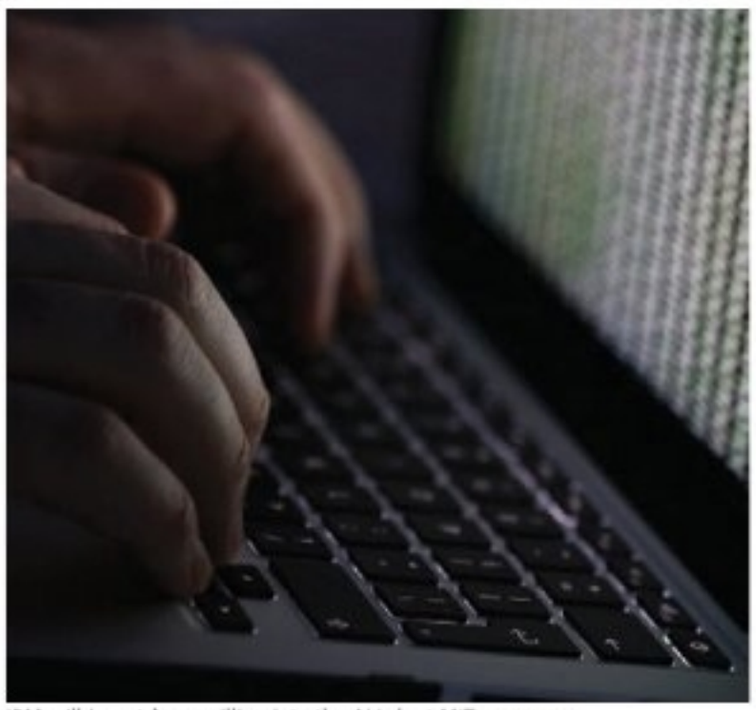
"AI holds a remarkable potential to advance knowledge for the betterment of humankind," said Anantha Chandrakasan, dean of MIT's School of Engineering, who was involved with the agreement between MIT and IBM for this lab. "We want scientists, professors and students to build machine-learning and AI systems that excel at both narrow tasks and the human skills of discovery and explanation."

One specific goal of the lab, Chandrakasan said, that would be for humankind's "betterment" is to use AI along with imaging in radiology to "automatically detect breast cancer," he said.

Health is a huge sector for AI advancement, but it's not the only area where the technology will flourish. Researchers will specifically look into the link between AI and cybersecurity, among others industries.

Though there are a few broad topics the lab aims to focus on – algorithms that can build on machine learning, the physics of AI like new hardware materials and devices, and learning how AI can be applied to industries such as healthcare and cybersecurity — MIT and IBM will also seek proposals from other scientists about what exactly to research.

"Researchers will investigate how AI can help individuals achieve more in their lives."
Anantha Chandrakasan



IBM will invest $240 million into the AI Lab at MIT. GETTY IMAGES

For some, AI may seem like something that will lead to losses — of jobs, of any kind of human labor, of human interaction.

But for researchers, AI is about the possibility of more.

That's the aim of one more big question Chandrakasan said the lab will seek to answer that really gets to the "good" of AI.

"The lab will explore this vital issue: How can AI deliver economic and societal benefits to a broader range of people, nations and enterprises?" he said. "Researchers will investigate how AI can help individuals achieve more in their lives."

New Massachusetts State Silver 100's to go quick

Bay Staters get 48 hours to snap them up at just state minimum

Massachusetts – The phone lines are ringing off the hook.

"It's like a modern day 'Gold Rush'," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

"Everyone wants to get their hands on the first and only Massachusetts State Silver 100's now being handed over to Massachusetts residents at just the state minimum set by the private Federated Mint before they're all gone," Withrow said.

"But don't bother calling local banks and credit unions because they can't even get their hands on these never before seen Massachusetts State Silver 100's," Withrow said.

That's because these valuable, proof finish Massachusetts State Silver 100's are not being released and minted by the U.S. Gov't. That's right; they're being released directly to the first 17,544 Massachusetts residents who beat the 48 hour order deadline exclusively from the vaults of the private Federated Mint.

"But you better hurry because these full one ounce Massachusetts State Silver 100's are struck in high relief .999 solid silver proof finish and will always be a valuable precious metal which is why everyone is snapping up as many as they can before they're all gone," Withrow said.

"As Executive Advisor to the Federated Mint I get paid to deliver breaking news. So if you're a resident of the state of Massachusetts you better call 1-866-637-3509 Ext.FMP250 right away because only the first 17,544 callers are guaranteed to get these valuable Massachusetts State Silver 100's at just the $99 state minimum set by the Federated Mint," Withrow said.

"Here's my advice. Don't wait to call. Pick up the phone right now and get as many of the new Massachusetts State Silver 100's as you can before they're all gone," said Withrow. ■

New Massachusetts State Silver 100's handed over to state residents

Massachusetts residents who find their zip code listed at right and are among the first 17,544 callers who beat the 48 hour order deadline are guaranteed to get the first and only Massachusetts State Silver 100's at just the state minimum set for Massachusetts residents

NON-STATE RESIDENTS Residents living outside the state of Massachusetts must pay double the state minimum for the Massachusetts State Silver 100's

Massachusetts – The vaults at the Federated Mint are nearly empty.

"We can barely keep up with all the orders," said Mary Ellen Withrow, the emeritus 40th Treasurer of the United States of America.

That's because the first and only Massachusetts State Silver 100's in existence are actually being handed over at just the state minimum set by the private Federated Mint to the first 17,544 Massachusetts residents who find their zip code printed in today's publication.

The only thing residents need to do is call the Toll Free Hotlines before the 48 hour order deadline ends.

Everyone who does is getting individual Massachusetts State Silver 100's at just the state minimum of $99 set by the Federated Mint. That's why everyone should be taking full Vault Stacks (pictured in the bottom right hand corner of today's newspaper) each loaded with three Massachusetts State Silver 100's before they're all gone.

And here's the best part. Massachusetts residents

■ MASSACHUSETTS RESIDENTS GET 20 STATE SILVER 100'S FREE: Pictured above is the never before seen entire 50 State Silver 100's Collection™ shown off by officials from the Federated Mint that everyone is trying to get. Lucky Massachusetts residents who are among the first 17,544 callers who beat the 48 hour order deadline to claim the 50 State Silver 100's Collection are actually getting 20 State Silver 100's absolutely free, the custom made State Treasury Display Chest is $285, but it's absolutely free for Massachusetts residents plus free shipping and free handling too. That means Massachusetts residents cover just the $99 state minimum set by the Federated Mint for the remaining 30 State Silver 100's which is a real steal because it's saving every Massachusetts resident over two thousand dollars today.

lucky enough to be among the first callers to claim the entire 50 State Silver 100's Collection™, pictured bottom left, are also getting 20 State Silver 100's absolutely free.

"I'm advising everyone in Massachusetts who finds their zip code on today's Distribution List to get to their phones right now because the new Massachusetts State Silver 100's are only being released to the first 17,544 callers," Withrow said.

Remember, this is not legal tender paper money issued by the U.S. Gov't. These historic Massachusetts State Silver 100's are a magnificent adaptation of the United States Treasury's one hundred dollar Federal Reserve Note. They are the first and only Massachusetts State Silver 100's struck in high relief .999 solid silver proof finishes released exclusively from the vaults of the private Federated Mint.

Just imagine how thrilled your children and grandchildren will be when you give them one of these impressive collections for their birthday, Christmas or any special occasion. Just be absolutely sure to keep the new .999 solid silver one ounce Massachusetts State Silver 100's and numbered certificates of authenticity inside the protective Vault Cases.

These stunning Vault Cases are custom made to hold, secure and protect both the Massachusetts State Silver 100's and the numbered certificates of authenticity in a heavy-duty transparent Vault Case that allows the valuable Massachusetts State Silver 100's to be viewed without ever being touched by human hands, thus preserving their valuable collector condition.

"We're bracing for all the calls and doing everything we can to make sure no one gets left out. So if lines are busy keep trying, all calls will be answered," said Withrow. ■

Major construction on Tobin Bridge set for next three years

Be warned when driving between the North Shore and Boston.

Work on the Tobin Bridge will stretch into 2020. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

Commuters who live in the Route 1 corridor should prepare for delays getting out of Boston over the next three years as the Department of Transportation prepares to embark on a restoration of the Tobin Bridge deck that will stretch into 2020.

The MassDOT board of directors on Monday approved a $41.6 million contract for J.F. White to conduct deck repairs, structural steel repairs and painting on a portion of the Tobin. White was the contractor on the last Tobin Bridge deck rehabilitation project, in 2008, according to MassDOT.

The work is expected to be completed in three stages, starting in April 2018.

Phase one is projected to last from April through November 2018, with phases two and three taking place April through November 2019 and 2020, respectively, though MassDOT said the project's expected completion date is June 2020.

The work will be concentrated on the northern-most spans, known as the Chelsea approach spans. The lower deck will be repaired while the upper deck will be repaved.

"The majority of this rehabilitation work covers approximately 3,350 linear feet of both northbound and southbound roadways on U.S. 1 along with about 400 linear feet of work on the Beacon Street ramp and 2,300 linear feet on the Everett Avenue ramp," Thomas Donald, MassDOT's director of bridge project management, said.

On the lower deck, workers will begin by removing the existing concrete fill from the bridge deck, then repair the underlying grid decks, install new deck joints, place new concrete fill into the repaired grid deck and then pave the roadway, Donald said.

When work begins, MassDOT will close one lane of the lower deck during each phase of the project, keeping two northbound lanes open to traffic. One lane of the upper deck will be temporarily closed Sundays through Thursdays, from 11 p.m. to 5 a.m., to allow crews to pave.

During phase one, expected to take place in 2018, the Beacon Street access ramp will be closed and drivers detoured for one month, and the Everett Avenue access ramp will be closed and drivers detoured for two months.

HOW TO BE A SOCIAL MEDIA INFLUENCER: THE GOLDEN RULE OF ENGAGEMENT

Let's talk about the basic etiquette of being an online influencer.

Social media makeup celebrity ILuvSarahii meets fans during the NYX Cosmetics opening at the Mall of America on April 15, 2016, in Bloomington, Minnesota. GETTY IMAGES

CASSIE HEPLER

POV

For those of you who have no clue what an influencer is, let me enlighten you.

It is basically a normal human being who has somehow found a niche in their field and many people follow their lead, fashion or advice. They then leverage their influence through social media, usually through the top three powerhouses — Facebook, Twitter and Instagram — with Snapchat being most popular among teenagers.

Being a journalist, blogger and an influencer, I have a foot in each door, which gives me a unique position to sit back and listen to mainly traditional journalists bitch about this new wave of media.

Major "celebrities" like, ahem, the Kardashians are brilliant business women who built an empire off of a sex tape and have millions of followers begging to see what fashion and perfume to wear with video cameras cashing in, following their every moment. The family is probably swimming in a pool of gold somewhere in Saudi Arabia like Scrooge McDuck.

But their followers are legit, not bought. In an age of instant gratification (swiping right a la Tinder is sadly a national pastime), why not pay to get 100,000 fake followers that make you look like you are a semi-superstar?

People with a meager 5,000 followers, or under, are dubbed the micro-influencers and not as sought after although undeniably more authentic.

There is also the golden rule of engagement

For instance, if somehow a Philly influencer goes from 20,000 to 300,000 in one week with no more likes or comments than usual, it's a red flag. But they can also buy likes. Wouldn't it make more sense to take that money and hire a social media specialist to grow your brand with real humans? But people like big numbers and they cannot lie. Their clients want to see all those zeros, which is a shame because it brings back zero return on investment.

Ted Cruz liked a hardcore porn video on Twitter

Things got heated on Sen. Ted Cruz's Twitter page on Monday night after the Texas senator, or someone with access to his account, hit the "like" button on a hardcore porn video.

The two-minute, 20-second video was posted from an account called Sexuall Posts, an adult content account that promises "full-length HD porn posted every day." The clip liked by Cruz's account is from a video produced by porn website Reality Kings.

Though Cruz, who ran for president in 2016 on a family values platform, didn't do anything wrong in terms of Twitter standards — the social media giant prohibits promotion of porn, but doesn't dictate what users can or cannot like — his communications team was quick to jump on cleanup duty.

"The offensive tweet posted on @tedcruz account earlier has been removed by staff and reported to Twitter," Cruz spokeswoman Catherine Frazier said.

The video wasn't posted to Cruz's account, though the "like" caused Sexuall Posts to add "@TedCruz's favorite porn account" to its bio, a change that was noticed by the Twitterverse and caused the senator's name to trend online.

This isn't Cruz's first run-in with the adult industry. Cruz raised some eyebrows last year when he talked about the time he watched porn with Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor during his time as a law clerk.

Earlier in 2016, the Cruz campaign had to pull an attack ad against challenger Sen. Marco Rubio after learning an actress they hired for the commercial was softcore porn actress Amy Lindsay.

And in 2007, then-State Solicitor Cruz tried to bar Texans from buying sexy toys, arguing, "there is no substantive due-process right to stimulate one's genitals."

The Future is Now?

B's youngsters could make roster push.

ERIC RUSSO
@NHLBruins
sports@metro.us

Charlie McAvoy BOSTON BRUINS

Anders Bjork BOSTON BRUINS

Don Sweeney knows it may appear that the Bruins have had a quiet offseason. The B's general manager preached patience ahead of free agency and refrained from making any major summer signings or trades, instead opting to add to the team's depth by inking forward Kenny Agostino and defenseman Paul Postma to one-year contracts, with an eye toward providing opportunity for Boston's wealth of young talent.

And that's why, despite a lack of acquisitions from outside the organization, Sweeney is quite comfortable with how the offseason played out.

"The offseason may appear somewhat quiet to the outside but a lot of the planning was taking place during the course of the [2016-17 season] and toward the end of the year, in particular," said Sweeney. "Charlie McAvoy and Anders Bjork, and [Jakob] Forsbacka Karlsson as well, were players that had made the decision to leave [school]. … The integration of these young players, along with several players who played in Providence, is going to create internal competition and is exciting for us.

"They have to prove that they can play and that they're ready for the challenge. Charlie's a good example, going in and handling himself very well [during the postseason]. However, the bar kind of resets and we'll see where they are come training camp. But the competition and opportunity will be there.

"When you couple that with [head coach] Bruce Cassidy running his first training camp and [assistant coach] Kevin Dean coming on board. I think there's a positive energy surrounding all of those elements."

Sweeney has made clear that there will be opportunity for Boston's bevy of prospects to make the roster out of camp. Up front, Bjork, Austin Czarnik, Jake DeBrusk, Forsbacka Karlsson, Danton Heinen, and playoff hero Sean Kuraly will be among the youngsters fighting for full-time work with the big club. And on the back end, Matt Grzelcyk and Rob O'Gara, each of whom had brief stints at the NHL level last season, will be looking to make an impact.

With so many players vying for a limited amount of spots, the competition during camp could be fierce.

"Our intention is to create a deeper roster from top to bottom. We want depth and several players have shown the ability to go up and down [between Boston and Providence] players like Kuraly, [Tim] Schaller, [Noel] Acciari, [Anton] Blidh, [Peter] Cehlarik, Czarnik, all took advantage of their opportunity last year.

"Let's see whether or not they can take it and run with it. You bring in a player like Kenny Agostino [last year's AHL MVP], along with a proven AHL scorer in Frank Vatrano…the opportunity is there, but these players have to go and grab a hold of it."

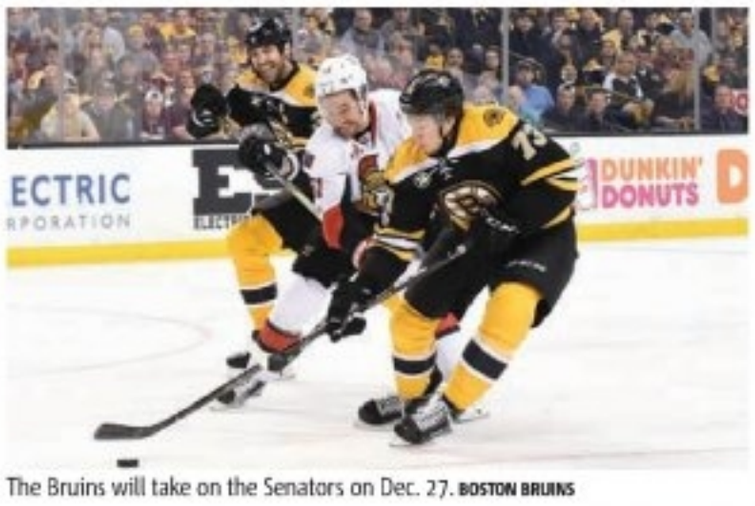
Regardless of who locks up some of the open roster spots, Sweeney said that – as always – the Bruins would look to their veteran core to lead the way.

"Teams lean on their best players, the core group defines the success of your team and how they lead," said Sweeney. "We have tremendous core guys [and] we have other guys that are beginning to move into that group…I think the support will be there for our younger players, the enthusiasm, the drive from our veteran players, will push our guys to their standard. I think the patience will be there from our coaching staff. … It is up to the younger players to reach a higher level of expectations."

Games to Watch

There are plenty of highlights on this year's Boston Bruins schedule, including the returns of former coach Claude Julien and the Black Friday matinee, the inaugural games against the Vegas Golden Knights, and four more contests against last year's playoff foes, the Ottawa Senators. Here are some of the top games to look forward to:

The Predators will invade TD Garden on Oct. 5. BOSTON BRUINS



The Bruins will take on the Senators on Dec. 27. BOSTON BRUINS

Oct. 5 vs. Nashville (7 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
It's the first game of the year. At the Garden. Against the defending Western Conference champions. What's not to be excited about?

Nov. 2 vs. Vegas (7 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
Boston welcomes the expansion Vegas Golden Knights to the Garden for the first time in the start of a three-game homestand.

Nov. 24 vs. Pittsburgh (1 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
The Bruins will take on the two-time defending Stanley Cup champions in the traditional Black Friday matinee game at TD Garden. Boston was 1-2 against the Penguins last season, with the lone win coming on Jan. 26 when Patrice Bergeron notched the winner in a 4-3 victory at TD Garden.

Nov. 26 vs. Edmonton (5 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
Boston hosts the up-and-coming Oilers, along with reigning Hart Trophy winner Connor McDavid, in Edmonton's lone visit of the 2017-18 season.

Dec. 27 vs. Ottawa (7 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
After a tightly-contested first-round Stanley Cup Playoffs series last spring, the Atlantic Division rivals will be back at it in the first game after Christmas. Ottawa won that playoff series in six games - all of which were decided by one goal. The Bruins dropped all four regular-season matchups last year.

Jan. 17 vs. Montreal (7:30 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
The B's first home meeting with their archrivals will bring with it a bit more meaning this season, as Montreal bench boss Claude Julien - Boston's all-time winningest coach – returns to the Garden for the first time since he was relieved of his duties by the Bruins last February.

April 7 vs. Ottawa (7 p.m. ET, TD Garden)
The regular-season finale will be at TD Garden against the Sens. Tickets can be purchased on BostonBruins.com/SingleGameTickets, through the official mobile app of the Boston Bruins, by phone by calling Ticketmaster at 1-800-745-3000 or at the TD Garden Box Office. Hitting the road

Bruins head out on first-ever fan fest tour.

The inaugural Boston Bruins Fan Fest Tour brought the Black & Gold experience to fans in each New England state earlier this summer, with one goal in mind: growing the game of hockey. The six-state, seven-city tour will conclude in Boston at Warrior Ice Arena on Sept. 16-17.

In each city along the way, fans had the opportunity to meet with Bruins players, coaches, and management while also participating in a variety of events, which included answering Bruins trivia to win prizes, visiting a mock Bruins dressing room, experiencing the TD Garden home broadcast booth through NESN's virtual reality and much more.

Throughout the Fan Fest Tour, the Bruins expect to suit up over 4,000 kids (ages 4-9), who have signed up for the Bruins Academy Learn to Play program, in brand new CCM hockey gear valued at $500 per player, for a total of $2 million worth of equipment dispersed to local communities.

The Bruins fan fest was a roaring success. BOSTON BRUINS/BRIAN FLUHARTY

PORTLAND, MAINE
The Bruins kicked off the first ever Fan Fest Tour at Monument Square. Colorado native Brandon Carlo joined Bruins assistant coach Joe Sacco and NESN color commentator Andy Brickley for Day 1.

MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE
Carlo returned for Day 2 and was joined by New Hampshire native Tim Schaller, goaltending coach Bob Essensa, general manager Don Sweeney, and Bruins alums Bob Sweeney and Andrew Raycroft.

"I grew up playing in Manchester," said Schaller, a native of Merrimack, New Hampshire. "It's fun to see the little kids who played for the same teams I did. … I saw a lot of familiar faces that I see around town. My brother, [Dave], obviously made the trip. It's good to see everyone here from New Hampshire."

BURLINGTON, VERMONT
Bruins assistant coach Kevin Dean and forward Frank Vatrano visited Burlington International Airport for the third stop of the tour.

SPRINGFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS
Vatrano returned to his hometown of Springfield and was joined by NESN play-by-play broadcaster Jack Edwards for Day 4.

"It's a dream come true to play in the NHL, but to play for your hometown team, to see kids wearing your jersey, its pretty cool," Vatrano said. "Its great to see the support I have here, it's what I call home and I love it here."

HARTFORD, CONNECTICUT
Bruins fans in Hartford flocked to the Old State House to join forwards Noel Acciari and Riley Nash for the Fan Fest Tour festivities.

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND
Rhode Island native Acciari, Riley Nash, Tommy Cross, head coach Bruce Cassidy, Providence Bruins general manager John Ferguson, and Bruins president Cam Neely took part in the event on Day 6.

Maximizing mornings with Bruins' Julie Nicoletti

Bruins' nutritionist shares some of her tips.

MICHAEL TOLVO
sports@metro.us

As the Boston Bruins gear up for another exciting season, a major focus for each player is ensuring they can perform at top speed. Just like Bruins players on the ice, when you take your morning commute to work, the goal is to get from point A to point B as fast as possible.

If you are not in the best physical shape, or you have an inefficient morning routine, your commute time can be dragged down immensely. Often, it is what you are eating that can make the biggest difference.

That is where Julie Nicoletti can be of assistance. Nicoletti, entering her third season as the Bruins' sports nutritionist, she is the founder of Kinetic Fuel, where she provides one-on-one nutritional education and counseling to athletes.

Nicoletti has some key insights on how you can make sure you are eating and drinking the right things to have your body performing to the best of its ability.

"It is essential to combine exercise with eating right," Nicoletti said. "Eating and moving are the two pillars of wellness and eating right while exercising helps maximize the benefits of exercise. It is much more challenging to achieve goals if you're exercising without fueling, hydrating and recovering properly. Whether that is a 5K, a marathon, losing weight or gaining lean muscle, without the proper nutrition combined with the training, it is much more challenging to get to where you need to be."

While it is clear that the things you put into your body have a tremendous impact on reaching your goals, there are pitfalls that many people fall into. Nicoletti provided two nutrition mistakes that she sees people commonly make.

"I think that it is evenly split between not knowing exactly what to eat and not having the discipline to follow through even if you have the knowledge," she said.

With that in mind, Nicoletti provided a number of quick and easy "on the go" snacks that you can take with you on your daily commute to avoid nutritional mistakes, fuel your body, and maximize the time you have every morning!

Coffee with Protein Powder
"If someone normally has coffee with cream and sugar, perhaps you might want to add some protein powder instead, adding vanilla protein can make it a French vanilla coffee, and you've avoided the syrupy French vanilla flavor."

Beef Jerky/ Turkey Jerky
"Great protein sources on-the-go. Look for healthier options with lower sodium."

Smoothie
"Smoothies are easy to drink during a commute and may contain veggies, fruit, protein and healthy fat — a full meal in a cup."

Overnight Oats
"Overnight oats in individual servings may be prepared in a mason jar all at once in preparation for the work week. Flavors may vary using cinnamon or nut butter, different seeds or fruit. Add yogurt or protein powder for additional protein. Loaded with fiber, overnight oats make a great breakfast or snack mid-morning or mid-afternoon."

Lettuce Wrap
"Fill bib lettuce or a large collard green leaf with your favorite protein filling-anything from ground chicken to roasted turkey or leftover taco meat for a healthy and satisfying lunch or snack that will leave you energized instead of ready for an afternoon nap."

Quinoa Bowl
"The options and combinations are endless with quinoa bowls. Whether you prefer shrimp and bok choy or chicken and tomatoes with basil or steak with onions and mushrooms, your quinoa bowl will provide a satisfying meal full of valuable nutrients."

Veggies and Hummus
"Vegetables contain valuable vitamins and minerals along with phytonutrients and antioxidants. Pair veggies with hummus for a delicious and nutritious snack."

Apple Slices or Strawberries with Peanut/Almond Butter
"Adding healthy fat like almond butter or peanut butter to fruit is not only good for you, but it will keep you full longer. The best PB-and-J is a strawberry filled with peanut butter."

Get moving and stay moving

For 15 years, John Whitesides put some of the world's premier athletes through the paces in the gym. As the Boston Bruins' strength and conditioning coach, Whitesides was responsible for keeping the Black & Gold prime physical shape.

But following the 2015-16 season, Whitesides decided to shift his focus to the community, and helped launch the Boston Bruins Foundation's BFit initiative, which aims to "encourage movement and promote healthier living throughout New England."

In addition to providing free school assemblies for youngsters across the region and hosting the First Responder Challenge, during which local first responders participate in a rigorous obstacle course at TD Garden to raise awareness for health and wellness, Whitesides is keen on using his expertise to help the community as a whole stay fit.

"The goal is approachable fitness … get people moving and doing something that's doable for you specifically," said Whitesides. "It's not a specific workout, it's not a specific exercise, it's not a specific meal plan … it's trying to get people to find things that work for them.

"Moving should be fun, moving shouldn't be work. Get moving and stay moving."

With that goal in mind, Whitesides offers a number of fitness tips for working men and women, who may not always have time to hit the nearest gym:

Walk, Walk, Walk
"If you can take the stairs, if your office isn't on the 77th floor and you can walk up three flights, if you can avoid the escalators…whenever you can walk, walk. The more you can get up and move, it's calories out. Walk more, move more."

Remember Gym Class
"You don't need a gym, you can do it at home. We all know from being kids in gym class – push-ups, sit-ups, body-weight squats, step-ups, lunges… there are so many alternatives, but people don't do those alternatives – they want to go to the gym and lift weights, but realistically all your answers we've learned in gym class."

Join a League
"If you were a good soccer player in high school, play soccer. If you're a good hockey player, find a league. There are tons of leagues in Massachusetts and tons of things people are doing to stay active. The more you have fun exercising or moving, the more chance you have at staying at it, especially if you make some friends and they make sure you're still there to do it."

Family First
"A lot of people come home and say, 'I'm tired.' Well, that's a great time to connect with your family. Go out and play with your kids, go out and walk the dog, go for a walk with your wife. There are so many excuses. If you look for excuses, there are so many ways to shut yourself down … it doesn't have to be a two-hour commitment every day."

The Boston Bruins Foundation connects Bruins with community

The foundation strives to develop and improve children's lives.

MICHAEL TOLVO
sports@metro.us

Since the Boston Bruins Foundation was created in 2003 by the Jacobs family, it has been dedicated to developing and improving children's lives, encompassing the four main areas of academics, athletics, community outreach, and health. Focusing on these areas of children's lives creates a solid foundation, a strong support system, and ultimately leads them to be impactful members of the New England community.

To accomplish these goals, the Boston Bruins Foundation works closely with the Bruins organization to orchestrate events in the community that promote the pillars of the Foundation.

The Boston Bruins BFit initiative, launched in January of 2017, encourages movement and promotes healthier living throughout New England. Boston Bruins Director of Health, Fitness & Wellness John Whitesides, helped develop the initiative. Whitesides and the Bruins utilize their expertise in professional strength and conditioning, nutrition, and physical therapy, to bring fitness to everyone in the community.

Bob Sweeney, executive director of the Boston Bruins Foundation, is very excited about the possibilities that the BFit initiative presents.

"Whether it's just training kids to eat healthier and exercise, or to incorporate the first responders, which is a big part of the BFit initiative, I think there are endless possibilities," Sweeney said.

The First Annual First Responder Challenge presented by National Grid occurred on Jan. 22 at TD Garden. The event invited local first responders from all over New England to participate in the rigorous course. On Feb. 28, Boston Bruins CEO Charlie Jacobs presented a check for $130,000 from the First Responder Challenge to the 100 Club of Massachusetts, which provides financial support to the families of fallen heroes.

In February, the Bruins and the foundation also announced the launch of their Green Up New England Challenge in partnership with Project Green Schools and Wal-Mart. The initiative strives to develop Green Student Leaders in schools across New England. In 2017, schools competed in categories such as energy reduction, waste reduction, water reduction and best green sports practices.

BPD commissioner William Evans BOSTON BRUINS

Sweeney credited Project Green Schools Director and Founder, Robin Organ, for her hard work on the event.

"Robin Orgon with Green Schools, she has added a new element," Sweeney said. "We had an opportunity to partner with Wal-Mart and Green Schools, and it was a no-brainer. To see what some of these kids do in the schools, it's pretty impressive, especially at a young age."

Sweeney also discussed the importance of current and former Bruins players teaming up with the Foundation to connect with members of the community.

"I think it's important to have some events where our fans can have interaction with our players," Sweeney said.

Fans had that opportunity at the annual Boston Bruins Foundation Golf Tournament on Sept. 11 at The International in Bolton, Mass.

"We had a sold-out field again," Sweeney said. "We integrate the alumni with the current guys and it's a good format, our fans seem to love that."

If you didn't get a chance to participate in the golf tournament, be on the lookout for an upcoming season kickoff event to be announced in the near future. It will be an opportunity for fans to connect with current players and coaches.

New authentic Adidas Boston Bruins jerseys available now

Get your new Bruins jersey in time for the season opener.

MICHAEL TOLVO
@NHLBruins
sports@metro.us

The NHL season is fast approaching, and thanks to the NHL and Adidas, the Bruins will be sporting fresh new jerseys when they hit the ice for the 2017-18 home opener on Oct. 5 at TD Garden, against the defending Western Conference Champion Nashville Predators.

Adidas worked with the Bruins to create a jersey that preserves the storied Black & Gold identity of the team, while making subtle enhancements to improve the performance and appearance of the new threads.

The tweaks include simplifying the coloration of the number and letter system, which maximizes both the arena and broadcast readability. From a performance standpoint, the implementation of new ADIZERO technology has resulted in lighter, cooler, and stronger jerseys. Whether you're a player or a fan, the upgrades Adidas has made will make sure that you feel and look your best when donning your new authentic Bruins Adidas jersey.

Bruins assistant captain, Patrice Bergeron, had the opportunity to wear the new Adidas jerseys when he represented team Canada at the 2016 World Cup. He said, "We know Adidas is always finding a way to keep thing classic, but also have a little edge too… We were wearing the Adidas jerseys for the world cup; they were really comfortable and great".

You can get your new Bruins jersey in time for the 2017-18 season by going to the Boston Bruins ProShop powered by Reebok, located on Level 2 of the TD Garden. The Pro Shop is open Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5p.m., and Sunday 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Lighter
Featuring new cresting materials and construction technology, the ADIZERO Authentic NHL jersey reduces crest weight by up to 46 percent, while a single layer perforated numbering system reduces number weight by up to 60 percent, in order to deliver a new jersey that is up to 19 percent lighter when compared to the current NHL jersey.

Cooler
ADIZERO features Adidas Clima technology in each of the jersey fabrics to deliver breathability and enhanced performance. Boston Bruins grow sport of hockey beyond New England

The Bruins made a "Bruins Global" trip to China.

CARYN SWITAJ
@NHLBruins
sports@metro.us

In New England, hockey is common.

Chances are that if you don't know much about hockey, you likely know someone who does. And based on the Bruins being around for 93 years, you likely know about them, too. Now, imagine you're in Beijing, China. All of the above will not be the case. Hockey exists, and there are skilled players and rampant fans, but the game is not as common.

Enter: "Bruins Global."

In the summer of 2017, for the second straight year, the Bruins made a "Bruins Global" trip to China to help grow the sport of hockey abroad.

Current Bruins players Torey Krug, David Pastrnak, and Tuukka Rask ventured over to China, along with former Bruin Hal Girl and the organization's youth hockey development team.

The visit was in partnership with O.R.G. Packaging and O.R.G Packaging Chairman Mr. Zhou Yunjie, who also hosted members of the organization in China in 2016. In addition to growing the game, the Bruins' partnership with O.R.G. Packaging assists in strengthening the connection between the Bruins and the local Chinese community in New England, and educating North Americans about the growth of hockey in China.

The "Bruins Global: China 2017" trip featured a 10-day journey through Beijing and Shanghai, with on-ice clinics and off-ice agility training for nearly 200 youth hockey players.

Bruins players taught the game of hockey in China this past summer. BOSTON BRUINS

After a 14-hour flight and 6,729-mile journey from Boston to Beijing, and adjusting to a 12-hour time difference, the Bruins Global crew soaked in the experience.

"We do a lot of things in Boston and we're involved everywhere we go, and I think it's cool to be on the global side of things and to be a part of it and come over here and grow the game," said Krug. "It's pretty special."

While hockey doesn't have as strong of an interest in China as it does in North America and in New England, the kids involved in the clinics were skilled and knowledgeable about the game.

"I think obviously there's a big language barrier, but universally, there are things in hockey you don't need to say," said Krug. "[The kids] were really focused and eager to learn."

Beijing will host the Winter Olympic Games in 2022, and O.R.G. Packaging's partnership with the Bruins is aimed at increasing interest in the sport.

"We appreciate the partnership with the Boston Bruins so much," said Jocelyn Li, secretary of O.R.G. Packaging Chairman Mr. Zhou. "The Bruins were actually the first NHL team that started working with us to grow the game in China. It's been so great, and we appreciate everything so much."

"Hockey's growing, but it's still a very small sport," said O.R.G. Packaging's Richard Zhang. "With the Bruins being the first team we started working with, we've been sending kids to Boston for the past two years to train there."

"And then having the guys come here every summer, it's been really important for the kids and parents to see the best in the world and to learn from the players has been really important for O.R.G. and the kids in China."

Most importantly, the kids have learned how to have fun.

"I think that the Western influence, the American influence of working hard and having fun, we've tried to give them that as much as we can to help the kids enjoy it," said Gill. "They're focused, and they should be — but they love to laugh and giggle and as long as we can incorporate that into learning their skills, then it's all for the better."

"We want to make people happy and especially the kids," said Pastrnak.

During down time in NHL, Bruins players absolutely love 'dad time'

The B's have plenty of players who answer to "Dad."

ERIC RUSSO
@NHLBruins
sports@metro.us

Patrice Bergeron, David Krejci, and Tuukka Rask have played with each other for nearly a decade. There is not much they have not experienced with together on the ice — from crushing postseason defeats, to historic comebacks, and, most importantly, a Stanley Cup championship.

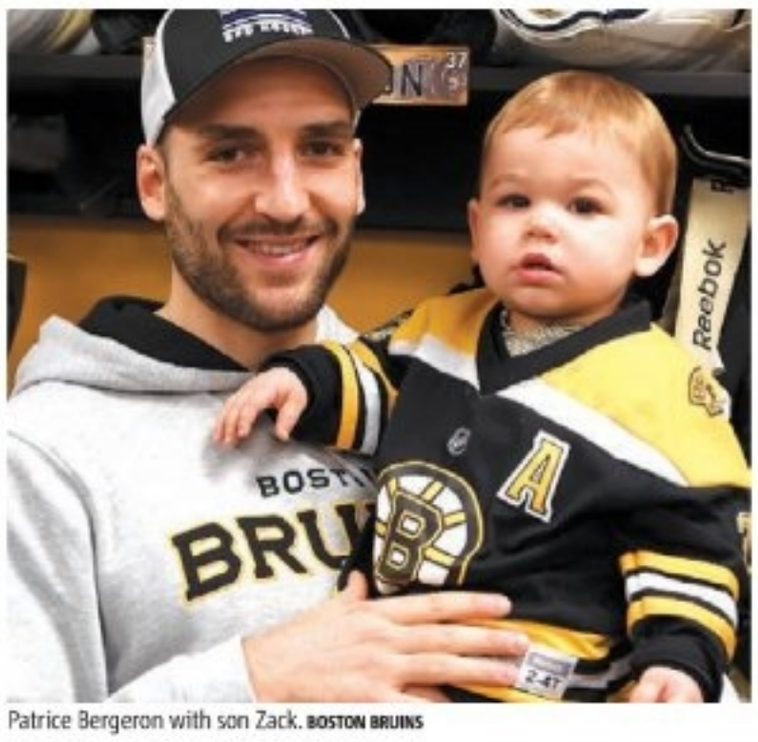
They have each developed into elite National Hockey League players with stacked résumés that include a combined four Selke Trophies, a Vezina Trophy, and two postseason scoring titles.

But it is their growth off the ice that is, without question, the most important.

Zdeno Chara with family BOSTON BRUINS

Each of them is now a father — with five children between them — and with that comes an unmatched level of responsibility.

"Hockey is your life and then there's the family," said Krejci, whose daughter Elina recently turned 2. "Family is the most important thing. Especially for my wife – my daughter is too little to understand – but it's so difficult for family during the hockey season, we're always on the road. Just spending time with them in the summer is amazing.



Patrice Bergeron with son Zack. BOSTON BRUINS

"Being a dad is just awesome. She just turned two, so I'm seeing her grow every day. Everything is new for her so she's discovering so many new things each day. It's fun to watch how she reacts to different people, kids and toys.

"Obviously, it's challenging at times … but I love every moment of it."

Selena & The Weeknd cohabitate

Selena Gomez and The Weeknd are that couple that you wish would just calm the hell down. We get it! You're in love! You don't have to remind us at every turn. We remember.

Anyway, these two young folks are cohabitating in New York City now. Because nowhere is safe.

E! News reports that the couple is sharing a luxury apartment together, temporarily, in Greenwich Village. Gomez is presently in town filming an untitled Woody Allen (ugh) project.

A source tells the site that it's a pretty "big deal" for the actress, who is "definitely immersing" herself into the "nitty gritty of New York." We're talking Greenwich Village, here, so I think it's not so much nitty gritty as it is, you know, a part of Manhattan that's less filled with actual garbage.

Good for them, I guess! If they can survive living together in an oversize luxury apartment that goes for $16,000 a month, they can survive anything!

Kid Rock loves black people

Kid Rock is, erm, a "country rapper" who may or may not be running for Senate. Like, did he buy the domain KidRockForSenate.com? Yes. Has he actually announced any sort of candidacy? No. No, he has not.

Nonetheless, he's taken to his website to deliver a political rant. "People! Pay NO attention to the garbage the extreme left is trying to create!" he started. Oh, dear.

"They are trying to use the old Confederate flag BS, etc. to stir the pot, when we all know none of this would be going on if I were not thinking of running for office." Ah, yes. People are upset about the confederate flag not because of the reminders of slavery, but because Kid Rock is maybe running for Senate.

He closed out his letter with a post-post-post-post-post-post script: "P.P.P.P.P.S. I LOVE BLACK PEOPLE!!."

Dear Dumbledore in Heaven, I beg of you. Deliver me from this ignorance.

His words, not mine.

James Woods' latest Twitter spat

James Woods is a dude I primarily remember for his role in "The Virgin Suicides." Now, he primarily gets attention by supporting Trump and saying insane things on Twitter. And now? Amber Tamblyn has accusing him of being a sexual predator.

On Monday, Woods drummed up some drama for a comment he made about festival hit and gay romantic drama "Call Me By Your Name," criticizing the film for "chipping away the last barrier of decency." (It's about a 24-year-old graduate student who falls in love with his professor's 17-year-old son, and honestly it looks really good.) Armie Hammer, who stars in the film, noted that Woods had dated a 19-year-old when he was 60 (true!).

Then Amber Tamblyn chipped in: "James Woods tried to pick me and my friend up at a restaurant once," the actress wrote on Twitter. "He wanted to take us to Vegas. 'I'm 16' I said. 'Even better' he said." Oh, dear.

Woods eventually commented in the only way he knew: by claiming that Tamblyn was lying. Pardon me while I tear my hair out in fistfulls!

Yeesh. No thanks, my dude.

Kylie Jenner's lip service

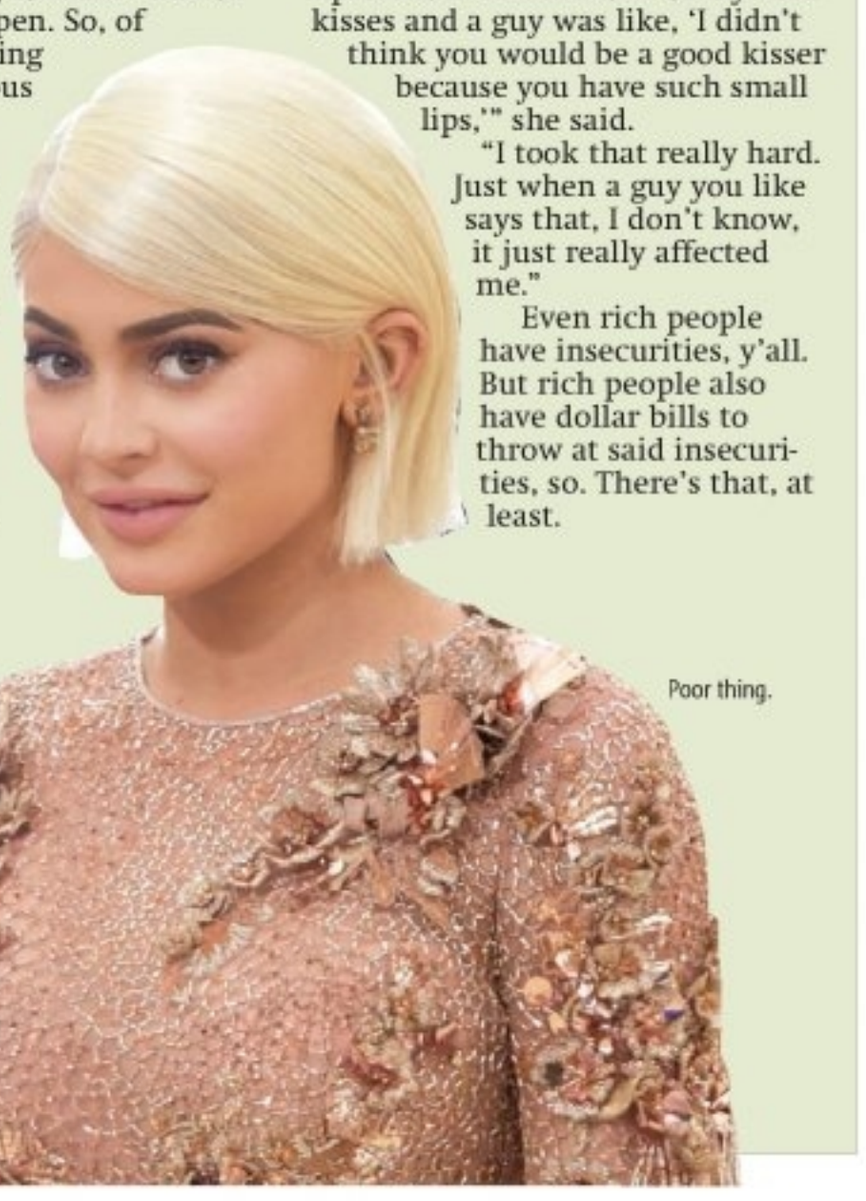
Kylie Jenner is still trying to make "Life of Kylie" happen. So, of course, she's talking about her infamous lips — and why she got them done in the first place.

Earlier this week, Kylie admitted she felt some insecurity about her face — especially her lips — from a young age.

"I was 15 and I was insecure about my lips. I have really small lips. And it was like one of my first kisses and a guy was like, 'I didn't think you would be a good kisser because you have such small lips,'" she said.

"I took that really hard. Just when a guy you like says that, I don't know, it just really affected me."

Even rich people have insecurities, y'all. But rich people also have dollar bills to throw at said insecurities, so. There's that, at least.



Poor thing.

Julia Stiles won't talk about teenage heartthrobs

But she'll talk about her new crime drama series, "Riviera."

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS
@rachaelclemz
rachael.clemmons@metro.us

Georgina (Stiles) may be stuck in some contrived plot lines, but at least the scenery is top-notch. JOHN WRIGHT

It's hard to tell when Julia Stiles is finished talking because she ends every other sentence with a raised inflection. She's also very aloof. No matter how I try to engage the "10 Things I Hate About You" actress, she won't budge. I can almost certainly hear, through the hum of her characteristically deep voice, a marked impatience. It sure feels like she can't wait for this to be over.

We're chatting because Stiles stars in "Riviera," a murder mystery/crime drama/display of extreme extravagance. For real. The whole plot hinges on a yacht blowing up. It's like "Revenge," but with a bigger budget — and much prettier views. Say what you will about the series, but the stunning views of Côte d'Azur that it offers are rivaled by no other.

We spoke with the 36-year-old, who plays Georgina Clios about her first major television role and how social media has changed the entertainment industry.

First of all, congratulations on your pregnancy!
I'm due pretty soon. I'm excited about it.

What's it like taking a major lead role on a TV series for the first time?
I was really struck by the premise of the show. Neil Jordan had described his idea behind it as, "Behind every great fortune is a great crime." And I just thought that was really interesting to explore, and particularly [in] the setting of the French Riviera.

I liked the international sensibility in the show, too. I love that it's such an international cast and that the scope of it is very international.

Speaking of Neil, how do you feel about him disowning the series after his writing was "heavily reworked?"
I mean, he's a very passionate, opinionated artist, right? And so sometimes that clashes with studio executives. I'm not really sure what happened. But I feel like we were still able to make a good show.

What was it like doing a series across the pond?
It was great. My only experience doing TV before was on an already well-established show (Stiles appeared as Lumen Pierce on the fifth season of "Dexter") and I was just along for the ride. To be in the lead in this show was a lot of responsibility, but I think because it was a European show, they were really open to my input, in a way that I'm not sure happens here.

Social media plays such a huge role for young actors these days. How do you feel about not having had that extra layer of performance as a young actor?
I was just thinking about that. I'm really glad that when I was starting out as an actor social media wasn't necessary for success as an actor, especially when you're starting out. I have a hard time enough navigating that now, having a little more experience, being a more recognizable actor.

The danger is that it gets in the way of being able to play pretend. Because you're advertising your own personality and your own real life, how can you trick people into thinking that you're somebody else?

Busy Philipps and Michelle Williams recently did this video where they reminisced about all the teen heartthrobs they kissed while on "Dawson's Creek." Can you dish about what your favorite teen heartthrobs are that you kissed back in the day?
That's so tricky because it's so different when there's a camera and a whole entire crew watching you. I hate to ruin the romance, but it's very different than a real kiss.

‘Strong Island’ will make people ‘do something’ about racism

Filmmaker Yance Ford on his “necessary” documentary and the power of Netflix.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
@MetroBOS
gregory.wakeman@metro.us

Yance Ford knows how timely “Strong Island” is. But he’s not just looking at its effect on the present — he wants its impact to reverberate far into the future and challenge and change people.

“What we were trying to say was that violence against black people happens so often and is so common, even in these idyllic places,” Ford said during an interview about his new film, a powerful and intimate exploration of the death of his older brother William in April 1992.

Yance Ford examines the murder of his older brother William in the Netflix documentary “Strong Island.” NETFLIX

Ford doesn’t just point the camera at his audience; he plays an integral character, too. Rather than being a cathartic piece of filmmaking, Ford instead insists that its 10-year journey to the screen was one of necessity.

“My brother had been dead for 15 years. It didn’t feel therapeutic or cathartic in any way,” he said. “It felt difficult because I knew how important it was, and it felt necessary because I was the only one in my family who was a storyteller, and I needed to make sure that the story didn’t go untold.”

“It was really, really hard, because I knew this film was going to be telling the future,” Ford continued. “One of the things that’s important about ‘Strong Island’ is not that it resonates with struggles that are happening now. It’s that it calls us to think about what these families are going through 25 years from now. And because this narrative has not changed now we need to get up and do something about it. And now we need to change the way we see.“

GETTY IMAGES

Netflix has provided “Strong Island” with the opportunity to connect with a large audience; Ford said the film probably wouldn’t have made it into cinemas anyway. “I don’t know if it would have had a theatrical life. Because our sales agent showed it to theatrical distributors before and during Sundance, and no one was interested in seeing the film,” Ford admitted.

You can take in Ford’s stunning documentary when “Strong Island” hits Netflix on Sept. 15.

Get ready for some end-of-summer frights because the MFA Boston is hosting a free, outdoor screening of "Get Out" this week.

In partnership with the Roxbury International Film Festival, the museum will show Jordan Peele's critically-acclaimed horror movie Thursday, Sept. 14. The latest installment of the MFA Film's Sunset Cinema series will take place on the lawn located by Huntington Avenue.

Attendees will also get the chance to play a few lawn games, make some art and enjoy music by DJ YVNG PAVL, starting at 6 p.m. Beer, wine and other goodies will be available to purchase as well, and guests are welcome to bring blankets, low chairs, picnic food and nonalcoholic beverages with them.

The actual screening of "Get Out" will take place at sunset, around 8 p.m.

The film stars Daniel Kaluuya as Chris, a photographer who has the worst meet-the-parents encounter with his new girlfriend, Rose, played by Allison Williams. The film is both a frightening thriller as well as a commentary on race and social issues.

Metro's review of "Get Out" called Peele's directorial debut a movie that "nailed how you pace a slow-burn horror number, how you use camera placement to elicit chills, how you turn a real-world drama into something far more insane" and a "terrifying chiller."

Try not to get too scared when the flick screens for free at the museum on Thursday night.

Boston is now the fourth most expensive real estate market in the U.S. ISTOCK

These neighborhoods have the fastest rising rents

Rent in Boston isn't cheap, but some neighborhoods are seeing rates rise faster than others.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

To residents here, it's no surprise that Boston rents are expensive. But how do Boston's own neighborhoods stack up against each other?

Real-estate site Zumper released a report that mapped neighborhood rent prices, and the picture, unsurprisingly, isn't too pretty.

The report started off by noting that Boston as a whole climbed up a spot this month on a ranking of the top one-bedroom median rents across the country. Boston has earned the notoriety of being the fourth-most-expensive rental market in the U.S.

Boston tied with Washington for the spot; in both cities, one-bedroom units rent for $2,200. In Boston, the price of two-bedroom units increased by 0.8 percent to $2,650. Boston beat out Los Angeles and Oakland in the ranking of the most expensive markets and came behind San Francisco, New York City and San Jose.

Within Boston itself, median rents can vary pretty widely. Another fact that doesn't come as a shock: Downtown Boston was the most expensive neighborhood according to the report, with one bedrooms seeing a median monthly rent of $2,950 this summer.

A common complaint by Boston residents is the continuing rise of rents across the city, so which neighborhoods saw the worst increases?

Even if they aren't the most expensive overall, Dorchester and Roslindale are getting hit hard by rising rates. The two neighborhoods had the fastest-growing rents since last quarter, according to Zumper, increasing 9.4 percent and 10 percent, respectively.

According to Zumper's map, one bedrooms in Dorchester now have a median rent of $2,090 and in Roslindale, they go for $1,750.

The cheapest neighborhoods, per the report, are Mattapan, where one bedrooms average $1,400; West Roxbury, where they are $1,650; and East Boston at $1,700.

In January, Boston saw its first drop in rents in almost seven years. After annually increasing rates, prices fell 1.7 percent, according to Reis Inc.

Reasons why Bruins can be Cup contenders in 2017-18

A look at a potential perfect storm for the 2017-18 Bruins.

RICH SLATE
@RichSlate
sports@metro.us

For all intents and purposes, fall is here. The NFL regular season has begun with the Patriots looking to go back-to-back, the MLB playoffs are right around the corner with the Red Sox in the middle of AL pennant discussions and training camp starts on Thursday for the Bruins. Their co-habitants of TD Garden — the Celtics — figure to have much more focus on them in 2017-18, which is understandable given that they acquired a star in Gordon Hayward and a legitimate superstar in Kyrie Irving, over this past whirlwind offseason.

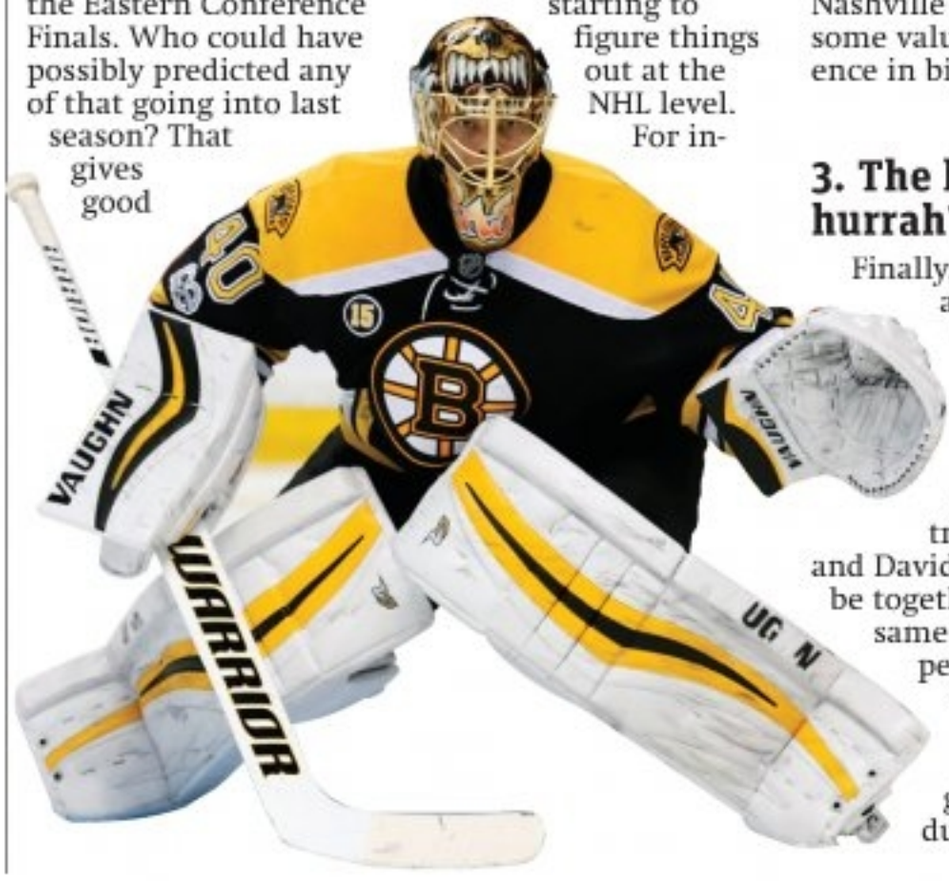
Assuming that the B's can finally hammer out a deal with their talented young winger David Pastrnak (somewhere in the neighborhood between 6 and 8 years) which has been hanging over their collective heads since bowing out of the playoffs in April, there is plenty for the Black and Gold to be excited about in regards to their upcoming campaign.

There are a few not that far-fetched reasons that the Bruins could even be a Cup contender in '17-18.

The Bruins have the pieces in place to make some noise in the NHL this season. GETTY IMAGES

1. Hockey is crazy

The first doesn't have that much to do with the team itself, it's much more of a reflection of the unpredictable nature of the NHL (unlike the NBA and NFL). Yes, the Penguins have defied logic by winning consecutive Cups but that's nowhere near the norm for the NHL. I think we can safely assume that Pittsburgh won't win its third Cup in a row so that leaves a wide-open race both in the league in general and the Eastern Conference in particular. After all, the Nashville Predators went to the Stanley Cup Final last spring while the Pens had to survive a Game 7 vs. Ottawa in the Eastern Conference Finals. Who could have possibly predicted any of that going into last season? That gives good but not great clubs like the Bruins the semi-realistic hope that they can go on an unforeseen playoff run that ends deep into the spring of 2018.



2. A good blend

More so than in recent history, the Bruins finally have a good mix of seasoned veterans and young guys just starting to figure things out at the NHL level. For instance, defensemen Charlie McAvoy and Brandon Carlo could potentially be franchise cornerstones for many years to come. Moreover, the Providence Bruins (Boston's AHL affiliate) made the third round of the playoffs last season, meaning their players that have a chance to be on the B's opening night roster on Oct. 5 vs. Nashville already have some valuable experience in big games.

3. The last hurrah?

Finally, it feels like a last ride of sorts for 40-year-old Zdeno Chara, Tuukka Rask, Brad Marchand, Patrice Bergeron and David Krejci to all be together on the same team — so perhaps it would be poetic for that accomplished group to produce another memorable season in the Hub. Marchand and Bergeron are two of the best players in the world at what they do while Rask and Krejci aren't as consistent, but they can still look like world-beaters from time-to-time. Chara is one of the most diligent and prideful professional athletes that Boston has ever seen, so you can bet that he'll put everything he has left into however much time he remains as captain of the Bruins.
